

Course fact sheet 023 – Info Burst Summer Season: Design detail

Book before 27th April and get all three evenings for £33!

In a departure from our usual format, for the summer we have invited a range of people, practising designers, horticulturists and Chelsea show garden designers to share with us important details and ideas – the what, why and how that produce successful ideas and solutions.

Each speaker will have the floor for 30 minutes showing only a limited number of images. The evening sessions will be chaired and there will be the opportunity for questions and discussion towards the end of the evening.

Why my plant associations succeed

023A

28th April 2010

Although all garden designers obviously use plants in their work, only certain combinations succeed, perhaps becoming signature associations. How are these selections made and why do they become winning combinations?

Sarah Price, Matt Biggs and James Aldridge share their special associations, explaining why these plants work so hard and how they originally put them together.

What I learned from my Chelsea garden

023B

9th June 2010

Each year at Chelsea, amazing gardens are produced that transform the playing fields of the Royal Hospital for one week only. As they are deconstructed and broken down, what do the designers learn from their experience and how does that information serve them in their work?

Three Chelsea award winners, including Tom Hoblyn and Kate Gould, each at Chelsea this year, share their notes and experience.

How I make construction work

023C

29th June 2010

Over the last decade hard materials have returned to the centre stage of garden design, often with new technology and sustainable solutions leading the way. Three designers known for their progressive use of hard materials share their selection and design processes to reveal how and why they produce such inspirational results.

Three leading garden designers including Philip Nixon explain and expand upon their decisions.
