

Course fact sheet 034 – Info Burst Winter Season

Where do you turn for design inspiration?

For this winter season we're taking a look at how pattern, texture and colour influence our garden design ideas and choices. If you are looking for inspiration on these dark winter evenings, come and hear what our speakers have to offer and be inspired!

Info Burst – Pattern: The Enticement of Geometry 034A 18th January 2011

Jackie Herald has an extensive background in textiles and textile design but has recently brought her skills and experience to the world of garden design, a profession in which she now practices. In May 2010 she produced The Experimental Pattern Sourcebook: 300 inspired designs from around the world. In the first of a new season of Info Bursts for 2011 we take a look with her at her findings, choices and the inspiration to be gained in our design work from this fascinating source book.

Info Burst – Colour: The Exploitation of a Sensation 034B 8th February 2011

In May 2011 Andrew Wilson's new book "Cutting Edge Garden Colour" will be available, a fresh look at colour in garden design that looks at how garden designers exploit this incredible phenomenon. For the last in this series of Info Bursts Andrew will be aiming to distil his experiences from the production of the book and how the use of colour has changed so dramatically over the last decade taking our gardens from pale pastiche to sizzling splendour.

Info Burst - Texture: The Fascination of the Tactile 034C 8th March 2011

Spend the evening in the company of Anthony Paul, a landscape designer for more than 30 years who is renowned for his innovative and contemporary gardens. Anthony is inspired by many stimuli such as the calm of Japanese garden design and the stunning landscapes and rainforests of his native New Zealand. Learn why texture is important in Anthony's work and how we can all use texture to our advantage.
